ZERA regulates the sector through licensing audits, monitoring of prices, setting standards and specification, fuel quality audits and compliance audits. The petroleum sub-sector in Zimbabwe is deregulated and comprises of private and state owned companies.

Why is energy storage important in Zimbabwe?

In Zimbabwe, the power crisis and increasing integration of renewable energy sources like solar PV and the largely accepted bioenergy would lead to the need for energy storage. Abandoned mines and transboundary aquifers in the country can be refurbished to operate as pump energy storage plants.

Why is Harare not regulating development?

Outdated master plans, local plans and building by-laws are failing to effectively regulate development and address the stresses caused by climate change. Enforcement of planning laws is also another issue, especially in Harare. Some settlements are just mushrooming whilst the Council ignores these developments.

Does Harare have a water supply system?

However, in most of the developing countries, the water supply system is no longer continuous but sporadic. In Harare, water supply is worsening by the day; most suburbs are receiving water once or twice a week whereas some are going for months without running water.
