

What is the warranty coverage of photovoltaic solar panels

Do solar panels have a warranty?

One of the primary guarantees solar panel manufacturers provide is a performance warranty. This warranty ensures that the solar panels will produce a specified percentage of their rated power output over a set period, often 25 years. For instance, after 10 years, a panel might guarantee 90% of its original efficiency, and after 25 years, 80%.

What is a performance warranty on solar panels?

Performance warranties on solar panels guarantee that the panels will produce a certain amount of power over a specific period. For example, a manufacturer may offer a 10-year performance warranty, meaning they guarantee that the panels will produce at least 80% of their rated power output during those 10 years.

What are the different types of solar panel warranties?

Solar panel manufacturers offer two main types of warranties: performance warranties and product warranties. Performance warranties cover the output of the solar panel and typically last between 20 and 25 years.

What does a solar installation warranty cover?

While manufacturer warranties primarily cover issues related to the solar panels themselves, such as material defects, workmanship defects, and loss of power output, the solar installation warranty extends additional protection to the entire photovoltaic system.

What is a solar contractor warranty?

Solar contractor warranties are essential to your solar energy system's overall protection. These warranties, provided by the installer, generally cover workmanship and installation issues. They ensure the solar panels are correctly installed, and the system operates as intended. The duration of contractor warranties can vary.

Are solar panel warranties transferable in a home sale?

In most cases, solar panel warranties are transferable to the new owner in a home sale. However, some warranties are restricted to the original owner, so it is crucial to clarify this point with the manufacturer and installer offering the warranty.
